Last night, at the 84th Annual Academy Awards, Tom Hanks paid tribute to "Carl", a veteran seat-filler who's become a familiar face in the audience, as he has performed this duty for 59 years. As you watched, did you think, "Wow, I wish I could have his job and sit in a star-packed house rubbing shoulders with the best in Hollywood"? Well, you can! Many awards shows, including the SAG Awards, American Music Awards, and the People's Choice Awards, use seat-fillers to fill empty seats when a star is either on stage or elsewhere in the building, so when TV cameras show audience shots, there are no empty seats. For more information on how you can be a seat-filler, visit www.seatfiller.com.

If you want to participate and be hands-on in the entertainment industry, but being a seat-filler is not your thing, here are other great opportunities for you to mingle with the stars:
